He first went to farming on the fruit farm on the Emmitsburg road about three miles south of town and later came to town to help his father in grocery store on Chambersburg street. Later the farm near Zora was purchased and John has been conducting farming operations for several years. His illness startled his many friends, coming while his father was very ill. National Park Gateway.

As we go to press news has been received of two deaths of former residents, Rev. James Bell King, of Hopkinton, Mass., over 80 years of age, and Mrs. Reuben Stallsmith, who before her marriage was Miss Hal Johns, of this place.

The Gettysburg National Park will have an entrance gateway from the Taneytown road at point where Hancock avenue starts near the rear entrance to the National Cemetery. This entrance gateway to the Park has been designed by Col. E. B. Cope, Superintendent and Engineer of the National Park Commission and will be a beautiful and ornate feature of the battlefield. The gateway will represent the work of local stone cutters, C. Wm. Ziegler and his son Ira. They have quarried the stone from the battlefield and have prepared practically the entire stone for the gateway at Washington.

The gateway will be twenty-four feet wide and on either side will stand a granite pillar four feet square and thirteen feet high, the cap stones will be surmounted by a granite ball, and on the ball will stand a bronze eagle with a spread of wings of sixteen inches.

From these gateway pillars will extend wing walls of granite, four feet high and running curved to a distance of fourteen feet and ending in granite pillars two feet square and with granite ball surmounting the cap-stone.

On the face of the large stone pillars on the Taneytown road will be placed bronze plates with inscriptions, and below these plates will appear circular seals of the United States.

The gateway requires a large quantity of cut granite blocks and Messrs. Ziegler have been at work on this granite work for the past two winters.

The work of the erection of the gateway began in earnest this week and one of the large pillars is advanced near to the cap-stone. The work will be pushed rapidly so that the early summer will see the park with an appropriate gateway, and one that will represent the genius of our own people.

Clerk of the Courts J. R. Hartman, who has been ill at his home on North Washington street for several days, is now much better. During his absence Wm. A. Tschirnbaugh, a former Clerk O. C. took care of the business of the office.

FARM TOPICS

April Suggestions for Beekeepers.

It is very important the honey bees receive immediate attention in preparation for the spring brood rearing, according to word received at the Adams County Farm Bureau office from Professor N. E. Phillips, extension bee specialist at the Pennsylvania State College.

Forty to fifty pounds of honey should have been stored in the hive by the bees, or fed by the beekeeper last fall to last the bees through the winter. As an emergency colony which may not be able to live on must be fed as soon as possible. The State College man advises sugar syrup, or water extracted honey, or the placement of frames of honey in the hive.

Each colony must have adequate room for spring brood rearing. The beekeeper's supply house does not permit the colonies to build up to its greatest strength by the time the warmer weather begins. For the best results each colony should be in a two-story hive and maintained throughout the spring. However, it is not too late to give extra room for brood rearing. As soon as the weather becomes settled place a second, live body of brood comb upon those colonies that are now one story high, and give the queen room for both stories.

Orchard Fertilization.

There are many orchards in Pennsylvania which fall far short of their possible productiveness, says Prof. Paul Thayer, extension pomologist at the Pennsylvania State College.

Fertilization will not take the place of proper pruning and spraying, which are fundamental requirements, but it frequently happens that they emphasize the need for fertilizer.

It is safe to say that practically every orchard in Adams county is in need of fertilization. The rate of growth of apple trees varies with the age and variety but in a general way an apple tree of bearing age should show at least a foot to eighteen inches of sturdy, new growth at the ends of the branches.

The time of fertilizer application to orchards is very important. The new growth and the fruit buds for another year are formed very early in the season, within a few weeks after blossoming time. It is essential that the application be made as early as possible, a week or two before blossoming, or at least by the time the delayed dormant spray is applied.

Stable manure is the best fertilizer, and quicker action can be secured with the addition of a little nitrate of soda.

When it comes to commercial fertilizer, three elements are to be considered. Nitrogen, the first, seems to be the most lacking. It is usually supplied in the form of nitrate of soda, though sulphate of ammonia is also used. Five to seven pounds is a moderate application for a mature tree. Four-fifths as much of the sulphate is used. For the amount of phosphorus to be used, recommendations vary from equal amounts of nitrate of soda and acid phosphate up to twice as much phosphate as nitrate. Except on a sandy soil, devoid of potash, there is not justification for the use in the orchard.

In the application, scatter the fertilizer evenly over the surface of the ground from a few feet of the trunk to beyond the spread of the branches. In the cold orchard it is broadcasted over the entire surface of the ground except next to the trees.

Hot Lunches for Rural Children.

Many teachers in the small rural schools are serving hot lunches. Those who do it best find that it is well to have the interest and co-operation of both school board and parents before beginning to serve lunches. The equipment needed is inexpensive. A few cooking utensils, a two-burner oil stove and some towels are enough. Children usually furnish their own cups, bowls, and spoons. There are many ways of obtaining the necessary food supplies for the warm noon-day dish. Sometimes the food is bought by the school and pro-rated among the children. It is important, if only one hot dish is prepared, that milk be used fresh in whatever is served, whether soup or some other food. By means of the hot school lunch children may be taught the value of foods in the diet, how to prepare them and how to select a properly balanced diet. Children will learn to like milk and vegetables if the foods are well prepared and are popular with other children in the school.

The United States Bureau of Education, Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C., has recently published two pamphlets giving suggestions regarding the school lunch. These may be had upon request.

UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA EXTENSION SERVICE IN MEDICINE

Co-operates With State Medical Society to Help Local Physicians and Surgeons.

Provost Josiah H. Penniman.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 3.—At the request of the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania the University of Pennsylvania, through its Graduate School of Medicine, has put into operation an extensive teaching plan by which physicians and surgeons of the entire State are receiving instruction in the latest developments of medicine and surgery. When the State Medical Society made this request, it was pointed out that Pennsylvania being the pioneer in the establishment of Undergraduate and also Graduate Schools of Medicine, was best fitted to initiate this new movement in medicine.

Dr. George H. Meeker, Dean of the Graduate School of Medicine, is in charge of it. Officials of the State Medical Society, as well as leading physicians and surgeons throughout the state, are co-operating to introduce it into the various counties. As rapidly as the County Medical Associations are learning of this unusual form of service, they are co-operating to the fullest extent.

The plan now being pursued with such success is to arrange a schedule of clinics in the leading hospitals. Distinguished members of the medical faculty visit the hospitals, consult the histories of the most interesting surgical and medical cases, and then with all the local physicians and surgeons as students give clinical demonstrations in which they show the latest and approved methods of treatment. This plan, which the University of Pennsylvania has already demonstrated in many of the State's leading hospitals, frequently with more than one hundred physicians in attendance, is to be widely extended.

Provost Penniman has also announced that the annual Schoolmen's Week Convention, in the interest of public school education, will be held at the University April 12, 13, 14. It is expected that fully 2500 delegates will be present.

The Summer School, which opens on July 2, announces a new course and demonstration schools in Rural Education, to be under the direction of Thomas S. Bock, who is director of Rural Education for the State of Pennsylvania.

Budget System for State.

It has been pointed out that Pennsylvania is one of the two States in the Union which still has no budget system. It is necessary for enlightened public opinion in Pennsylvania to assert itself. A budget system should be written into the constitution without further delay, so that it will become a fixed institution, binding upon future governors and future legislatures alike.

There has been introduced in the Senate, by Hon. George Woodward, a joint resolution to amend the constitution to establish an executive budget, without limiting the powers of the legislature to use its free judgment in making appropriations. The amendment is recommended by the Commission on Reorganization of the State Government. A practically identical resolution has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Hon. Joseph G. Steedle. The first of these resolutions lies in committee. The other is making progress with the possibility, at this late day in the session, that the General Assembly may adjourn before either resolution reaches the Governor.

is no real opposition in this commonwealth to a budget. Inertia, therefore, is its greatest foe. It behooves civic groups, public-spirited citizens, taxpayers' bodies, and others interested in the welfare of the State and the economical administration of its affairs, to take action at once. Otherwise, two years more will be lost before we can amend the constitution of Pennsylvania to assure a sound, workable, effective budget system in this State. Immediate action is necessary. Every member of each house of the General Assembly should receive urgent communications from his constituents so that these resolutions will be put through both houses before the day of adjournment, which may be April 26th.

For the guidance of citizens desiring to communicate with their legislators, Senator Woodward's resolution is known as Senate Bill No. 571, and Representative Steedle's as House Bill No. 700. It is desirable for both to be advanced to passage as rapidly as possible.

Scarlet Poppies for Memorial Day. An appeal that Americans everywhere wear scarlet poppies on Memorial Day "in honor of the men who fell in France" has been sent to the nation-wide membership of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at the request of the American Legion. The Legion has selected this blossom symbolic of those that blow in Flanders fields "between the crosses row on row," to pay tribute to comrades who gave their lives. In communicating the request Elliot H. Goodwin, resident vice president of the chamber said: "With this request we very gladly and sympathetically comply. It is our hope that organizations of business men will promote the wearing of poppies on May 30."

Poppies will be sold by American Legion posts and units of the Legion Auxiliary for the benefit of its graves endowment fund, for service and relief work and for war memorials.
